

EDUCATIONAL LEADERSHIP FOR SENIOR LEVEL OFFICIALS OF EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS

Programme Overview

The exponential growth of demand for higher education in developing countries has led to both the establishment of a large number of new educational institutions as well as to the restructuring of many existing institutions as they sought to increase their educational offerings and retain their relevance in a globalized economy. The Asian region is no exception.

The prioritization of goals, objectives, financing, human resource management, administrative law, technology and quality assurance along with the context within which educational systems need to respond needs to be revisited.

As the student intake increases and the number of educational institutions grows, more administrators are called upon to establish, run and transform institutions sometimes within a short span of time.
